

A Guide To Veterans And Military Service Organizations

Introduction

Sometimes it can seem like there is nowhere to turn when you need help. But if you are a veteran or family member of a veteran facing challenges in your everyday life, you are not alone. In addition to government- and senior-based resources, there are hundreds of veterans and military service organizations ready to help your veteran family. Some are local; others are national. Some have very specific veteran interests; others involve the entire family.

Not only do veterans and military service organizations provide assistance with benefits and VA claims, advocacy, career counseling, temporary financial assistance, and advice on medical issues, but they also offer mentorship, opportunities to share stories of strength and recovery, and family support networks.

This book supplies information concerning organizations providing services to the veteran community. For the complete 2017 directory of veterans and military service organizations and state directors of veterans affairs published by the Department of Veterans Affairs (VA), visit va.gov/vso .

About BlueStar HonorCare

BlueStar HonorCare is a service-disabled, veteran-owned small business dedicated to improving the quality of care and life of veterans and seniors everywhere. Offering medical, emergency and health alert systems and senior care products, BlueStar helps make independent living safe and enjoyable while delivering peace of mind to seniors and their loved ones. BlueStar also provides directories of veterans services and organizations and online resources to make aging in place easy and attainable while also keeping veterans and their families connected and supported.

Founded in 2013 by retired U.S. Navy Rear Admiral Robert O. Wray, Jr., BlueStar is owned by veterans, focuses its services on families with veterans, hires veterans and donates a portion of profits to veteran causes. For more information, visit bluestarhonorcare.com .
